All files are released under the GNU general public license or any open source license. The source code for all icons and explanations can be downloaded from: A: In the file description they say that it has a GPL license but as far as I can tell all the examples are under the LGPL license, which is the same as the GPL but for native languages. I suggest you use a package such as this one which has icons under the LGPL license. Q: Issues with margins in a environment I'm currently working on a poster, and I've placed three examples of the problem I'm having on this site: (Notice the space between the "poster" and "images" section. This space is causing an issues with the layout.) The image is larger than my environment. The text is not centered. The background is not centered. What is the best way to properly align these elements? A: It's because you are using \centering which has a 8pt gutter around the contents that it's centering. Remove it and it will center. \centering with the \makebox[\textwidth]{\vspace*{...}} approach to setting the vertical space works because it just reduces the vertical space to be in place. If the \vspace*{...} space isn't there, the centering would be like \vspace{1in} \documentclass[border=2pt]{standalone} \usepackage{blindtext}% for dummy text \begin{document} \begin{center} \makebox[\textwidth]{\textbf{front text}} \makebox[\textwidth]{\textbf{center text}} \makebox[\textwidth]{\textbf{back text}} \end{center} \end{document} In the final picture you didn't use \centering but just \vspace*{...} to create this space. See how it is not centered? It's due to this \vspace*. The \vspace{12pt} is too much and it's pushing the text to the right. Instead, just use \vspace*{...}. var replaceExt = require(' b7e8fdf5c8

Besides the designer boutiques and coffee shops, there are street musicians, bakers, painters and fashion designers. One of the final things that New Yorkers love to do is to take a break from all the activity and calm their minds by strolling through the streets and taking in the sights. In the West Village, it's not unusual to walk down the streets, take a glance at the art, listen to a play on a stage and then watch some people go past in the very same spot. Here are eight scenes from the West Village that prove it's a relaxing area to walk around. [For the record, these photos were taken on a Saturday in April and I've put them in approximate order. 1. At the corner of Christopher Street and Sheridan Square, a musician plays music. 2. A young man and woman pass by. 3. A couple walks to meet one another. 4. A pair of women play "Guess I'll take you home." 5. A young woman puts on her lipstick. 6. A man puts his sunglasses on. 7. A woman in a bar watches a couple walk by. 8. A young man plays his saxophone.] You can follow the discussion on Twitter at #WestVillageStroll.Treasury Secretary Steve Mnuchin says the Trump administration is moving to reinstate a ban on U.S. citizens from doing business with Chinese tech company ZTE Corp., which was crippled by a Commerce Department penalty in April 2017.
